Appointment of new Core Programme Team

TLRP Bulletins are intended for simple communication across the Programme and will be a little more formal than an ordinary email. They may be printed and filed for reference, but will also be accessible from a website archive. In this first TLRP Bulletin, it is a pleasure to be able to report the appointment of the new Core Programme Team colleagues who will be supporting TLRP from May 1st 2002.

Our new Deputy Director is Dr Mary James from the University of Cambridge. This is a 0.7 appointment and, combined with her present work on her TLRP project, Learning How to Learn, she will be exclusively working on the Programme. Mary will be particularly concerned with Phase 1 Networks and Phase II projects on school education. (mej1002@cam.ac.uk)

Dr Kathryn Ecclestone from Newcastle University has been appointed as part-time Associate Director, and will support work in FE and adult education. You may be interested in her book, Learning Autonomy in Post-16 Education. (Kathryn.Ecclestone@ncl.ac.uk)

Dr Alan Brown from the Institute for Employment Research, University of Warwick is to be part-time Associate Director, to assist colleagues concerned with workplace and lifelong learning. See his Review of Vocational Education and Training Research in the UK (with Ewart Keep). (alan.brown@warwick.ac.uk)

John Siraj-Blatchford from the University of Cambridge has been appointed as part-time Associate Director, and will be responsible for coordinating the development of the Programme's ICT infrastructure and for work on ICT in teaching and learning across the Programme. See his website www.ioe.ac.uk/cdl/datec. (js303@cam.ac.uk)

Each member of the academic team will contribute as appropriate to supporting projects on HE. Such work will be coordinated by Andrew Pollard. (ajp67@cam.ac.uk)

Dr Lynne Blanchfield has been appointed as Research Associate and Programme Office Manager. She comes from the Open University's Cambridge regional office where she has had responsibilities for student support. This is a full time appointment and Lynne's experience gives her an unusual combination of research and administrative expertise.

Suzanne Fletcher has been promoted to become the full time Programme Secretary and will continue to fulfill many core administrative roles on behalf of the Programme, including the organisation of events. (sf207@cam.ac.uk)
